

Christian Massey

Christian is a staple in the community. He works with The Guild to assist in the distribution of food, critical supplies, and other provisions that families need in the community during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Christian has found freedom through his truth; Christian's truth was not always a pretty one. He was an introvert for many years. Being a black young man in America, he was not sure how to ask, or where to seek help. Having a good rapport with his siblings and his parents allowed him to have a very deep conversation about his future. He has inspired others by speaking openly about his struggles and process.

At 15 years old, he found the structure that led him to understand that being a man of service and helping others proved he was extremely wealthy. The wealth was not measured in dollars and cents but rather by the relationships, connections, and acts of kindness that he enjoys in the community.

Now in his senior year of high school, he is experiencing a school year like no other. He is confident in his innate ability to strive for excellence, despite obstacles.
